The lungs of three victims of histoplasmosis were examined histologically. Microscopic changes in the lungs consisted of fibrinous and granulomatous inflammation. In two patients the inflammation extended into the alveolar parenchyma, causing the development of acute exudative pleuritis. In one patient an embolic arteritis of the pulmonary artery was responsible for extension of the inflammatory process to the pulmonary parenchyma. This particular vascular lesion was not found in the other two patients with interstitial pneumonia and extension of inflammatory process to the alveolar parenchyma. The main feature in each of these three cases was the extension of the inflammatory process to the alveolar parenchyma. The authors considered that this phenomenon is due to the epithelial injury of the alveolar membrane secondary to the infection.The use of video in the school setting has become popular with educators throughout the country. In many states, policies dictate that school administrators should show the student or parent an objective image of the child to assist in evaluating whether the child is fitting in the classroom. Video equipment is used to record video or audio images of student for later use and comparison. It has been used in the classroom by the teacher to show a particular activity, class, or a part of a lesson. It can be used at the beginning of a lesson to show a particular concept
