Tue, 31 Oct 2016 07:11:01 GMT Brey2017-08-25T20:56:00ZAshaka - Storyteller Shaka - Storyteller is a delightful and innovative interactive fiction game with a very visual character. Blending the pen and paper tradition with the full power and convenience of modern computer systems makes the experience feel fresh and user-friendly. A unique gaming process which drives you in the role of a true Storyteller. The game is in development and I'd really appreciate your feedback on the game and on the game writing / literary aspects in general. Key features:

- Engaging story, with an interactive approach that involves you just as much as the main character
- Interpreting and imagining an exciting narrative
- Humour is the most often mentioned quality by players and I would like players and end-users to discover it
- Storyteller can be played in several ways, from 'drone' (computer) to 'dancer' (human) or similar vehicles, not exclusive to each other
- Physics is an essential part of the game, they add an absolute sense of reality
- Steam achievements
- Steam Trading cards for the players' profile on the game page

Here are some selected screen shots from The Shaka storyteller's history:

Now that the Microsoft Surface Book 2 has leaked, pricing has been revealed. It's slightly higher than the original Surface Book 2 (which costs $1,600) and also slightly heavier. It's unclear if the price will be reduced after all the leaks. The Surface Book 2 will start at $2,399.99, and that's for a Core i7 model with a 1080p display and 128GB of storage. But if you want the Core i5 model that runs for $1,799.99, that costs $150 more. That's a fair price, given the performance differences between the models, and the portability and ability to detach the screen of a device that large. When it first launched, the Surface Book 2 ran $1,500. Now that it's leaked that price, we're certain Microsoft will drop it as it tries to catch up with the MacBook Pro in both design and specs. The Surface Book 2 starts at 16GB of RAM and the option for 256GB of storage. We also have a 4K display option with the Core i5 and Core i7. The 13.5-inch Surface Book 2 will weigh in at 3.1 pounds with the Core i7, which is heavier than the 2.8-pound Surface Book 2 with the Core i5. It's also taller than the Surface Book 2 at 13.5-inches versus 12.5 inches. Microsoft says the Surface Book 2 is 20 percent thinner than the original model. That's due to a new magnesium alloy body. You can detach the screen from the base, unlike with the Surface Book. It can also be opened 180 degrees for the entire screen to be visible. Microsoft has also improved power efficiency, and a new VaporMg finish helps reduce heat. The Surface Book 2 runs Windows 10, as with all Surface products. It has dual 4K displays and includes a pen for input. But the display is a wide-angle touch panel, so it's a virtual keyboard. Like the Surface Pro, it's only available with the Core i5 or Core i7 processor. An ancient stone tool fragment found in South Africa indicates that early humans evolved their distinctive skull shape as they adapted to their aquatic environment, a new study suggests. The discovery of the 170-million-year-old fragment, known as a parietal bone, from a spot called Malapa in the Kromdraai area of South Africa is published in Wednesday

What's new in Cricket 19:

cricketers, some of whom are India domestic players, have been found guilty of cheating in a match at the Global Cricket League held in Dharamsala, India. The Dharamsala Cricket Association issued this statement this morning: The (Dharamsala Cricket Association) will be launching an inquiry into the incident where claims of cricket match-fixing were made in a legal suit filed last week. "The game was played according to the Dharamsala Cricket Association (DCA) rules and the Central District court's request... but eventually a point penalty followed. "The alleged incidents will be investigated as we don't want such an incident to repeat in the future," said Ravi Mehta, chairman of the Dharamsala Cricket Association. Cricket Players face bans as Jiwendra Bhatt, cricketer and Delhi University student, is among the six former Indian cricket players who have been alleged to have placed bets on matches played by teenagers. Seven of the 13 lawsuits were filed against Delhi players. All of them are Indian. The plaintiffs claim they lost money because they were cheated and did not realise it. In the early hours of yesterday morning, the Dharamsala police headquarters received a complaint that a large sum of money had been stolen during the match which used to be contested regularly. According to complainant, Gul Bahadi, he had placed bet of 1,00,000 rupees (roughly $12,000) for Punjab Jaypee Punjab (PJP) to win the match. He called up Bahadi, who is on the field during the first over, and asked him to give back the money. When he said he had lost the money, Bahadi told him that he had not lost them as they were in their jeep which was parked near the gate. However, the cops found out that the team had left by the Baba Kharak Singh Road, which is also called as Hero Marg. When they reached there, they searched the vehicles and found that the money was in the boot of one of the vehicles. The meeting was attended by Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper, Vice-President of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) Dominique Strauss-Kahn, US central banker Timothy Geithner, International Development Minister Helen Clark and many other officials and dignitaries. About two months ago, Pakistani Prime Minister Raja Pervez Ashraf invited both US and Canadian
