Q: Call function from another JavaScript in ASP.NET I would like to try call a function of another JavaScript file from my.NET. To be more specific, I want to make (MyPage.aspx): ... function myFunction(){ alert('hello'); } ... Then i want in (MyJsfile.js) this line: jQuery(document).ready(function($){ alert('test'); }); So the only solution I found is creating a library (MyJsfile.js) with (MyJsfile.js): jQuery(document).ready(function($){ alert('test'); }); function myFunction(){ alert('hello'); } But this is horrible. A: If you move the function out of MyJsfile.js and into your calling Javascript: ... function myFunction(){ alert('hello'); } ... You should then use whatever global variable you're using in your main script to reference the function from MyJsfile.js. 1. ## Ni No Kuni® Unlimited Edition Coming to PlayStation®4 this September

Just beyond a sea of mist lies the world of Ni No Kuni, a land where animals called human come from. This land was born with the arrival of humans. And what follows is the story of five young people who awaken the power inside their hearts.

Nikola Tesla once said: "We humans can no longer afford to wait for tomorrow; we must act while we still can." Thus, Emanuele Yemm is a father who pleads with the fates to continue the human race. But then, one day, a young boy wielding a sword named Oliver, appears. He is eager to begin new adventures, and the young Emanuele and Oliver are adopted and become friends. The fate of the world therefore lies in the power of these two children.

Sortan Sortan () is a former municipality in the Qatari Peninsula on the west coast of the country and now forms part of Al Daayen Municipality. It was known as Rufayd after 1921, and Sortan and Sargent before that. The effects of a drought in the late 1940s, along with larger neighbouring urban areas such as Hamad International Airport, led the local population to migrate to this area for agricultural opportunities. As of 2015 it has a population of 8,603. The majority of residents are expatriates, mainly Pakistani workers. History The name of the town originates from the word 'Sar-tu-un', which means 'we are going' or 'the departure for another land'. It originally was a traveller's resting place near which is the Tomb of Sayid Ahmad Noorani-e-Khatmiyun in Gujrat. This tomb and its relics date back to the time of the 5th Islamic caliph Sayyid Harun. Up until the unification of Qatar, the area was known as Khayyat. Before the beginning of the first century CE, the town was the center of several large tribal Berber clans. By this time, the people still occupied the fortification and had built ten beautifully decorated mosques in a circle around the center of the town. By the time of the Ottoman rule in the early 19th century, Sortan was the second largest town in Qatar. Initially it was a trading center which is best known for its pigeons, buffalo and goats which came to trade with the tribes and locals. Moreover, there were two oil wells around the area which opened the first marketplace in the country around the early 1920s. The last independent ruler of Qatar, Sheikh Abdullah bin Khalifa Al-Thani (1905-1976) established a small palace in 1944 near a large lake. In 1920, the town's population included more than twenty thousand inhabitants before declining to a mere 8000 by 1936 due to internal conflicts and the King's move to the sea. Geography Sortan is
